

T-LEVELS YOU SAID, WE DID.

YOU SAID	WE DID
T Levels need to be more accessible to students.	• Limited new T Levels to 1,080 guided learning hours, plus the industry placement, and managing down the size of existing T Levels. • Reduced unnecessary, duplicative content and complexity in existing T Levels where it is not necessary to demonstrate threshold competence. • Ofqual confirmed they will allow retakes of individual core exam papers rather than the full set.
Assessment and delivery need to be more manageable for providers.	• Reduced assessment duration e.g. from 2 down to 1 Core exam in Education & Early Years, and a significant cut in Core assessment hours in the Health T Level. • Reduced evidence and staff time needed to deliver assessments, including less assessor-generated evidence and greater flexibility in assessor-to-student ratios. • New CPD offer to support providers with assessment methods and logistics. • New industry placement delivery framework now in place, inc. multiple employers, remote working and project based-approaches.
Providers and employers need more support to deliver industry placements.	• Strengthened employer engagement through more than 1,400 T Level Ambassadors and an SME campaign. Direct support for key sector intermediaries to promote T Levels with their members. • Promoting T Levels to senior NHS leads, with industry placement coordinators supporting growth in Health placements across the NHS. • Extended the Employer Support Fund and introduced additional funding for Construction placements. • Strengthened support packages for providers and employers, including workshops, peer learning, CPD and practical online guidance.
Universities need clearer information and greater confidence in T Levels.	• Continued working with higher education providers to support recognition and progression, sharing student success stories. • Published resources and guidance to help universities understand T Levels. • Nearly 200 higher education providers now accept T Levels for at least one course, including the majority of Russell Group universities

Our commitment: To continue working with you to ensure that T Levels are manageable to deliver and accessible for students
